

MILLIONS ARE MADE ANNUALLY IN TIMBER

Ireland Should Make as Much
Proportionate to Her Size
as Germany.

Special Cable to The Tribune.

DUBLIN, Dec. 4.—The lord lieutenant of the County of Wicklow recently visited the County of Wicklow, and took part in the Arbor day ceremony promoted by the Irish Forestry society and the Urban district council of Bray. Mr. J. Scott-Kerr, one of the secretaries of the Forestry society, said that in Germany a profit of twelve millions was made annually out of timber, and he did not see why Ireland should not, in proportion to her size, also make an appreciable profit.

The lord lieutenant, in the course of an address, said that for a long time in Ireland there had been more theory than practice in regard to this great matter of preserving and planting trees. Happily, within the past few years, the Irish Forestry society had been formed, and it had taken up the subject with vigor. The movement would have whatever assistance the government could give it, and he was sure that it would be continued with success.

Having acquired a distant colony, the Prussians seem anxious now to possess a merchant service. At present their commerce is carried in foreign bottoms, chiefly British and German, and they do not see why they should be dependent upon others when they might have ships of their own.

The recent storm which swept over central Europe did a great deal of damage throughout Austria, and some lives are reported lost. In Vienna, the Ambrosia society conferred aid in over a hundred cases. Pedestrians were blown over while crossing the streets, and workmen were blown from their jobs. Many minor incidents are reported.

An instance of the longevity of the country people in Ireland is afforded by the parish of Inver, County Donegal, where, on a small farm, resides an old woman named Mrs. Anne Gallagher, and her three sons and two daughters. Two of the sons and one daughter are in receipt of old-age pensions, and within a few months the third son will also be eligible for a pension.

The first performance of Franz Lehar's "Count of Luxembourg" took place before an enthusiastic house. There were repeated encores of the songs and dances. The most steps were particularly appreciated, and the success of the "Merry Widow" repeated.

Nothing definite is known regarding the intentions of the rebels who have captured Aush, but as the Shabazzis are the most numerous and most warlike of the Persian tribes, and have often fought on equal terms with Russian forces, any concerted action on their part must have serious consequences. Troops have been dispatched by the government, both from Tabriz and Teheran.

The Zolt of Vienna states that an Austrian engineer named Berthel, living at Graz, has invented a projectile, to be discharged from a rifle, that will be capable of bringing down even the heaviest airplane from the height of more than 2,000 feet. The projectile is described as a distinctive aerial torpedo.

Joseph Sauer, an escaped German convict, has been arrested in a wood near Herisau, Switzerland. The police had been looking for him for two years. Sauer's hunting grounds were the Swiss shores of Lake Constance, and his burglaries were numerous. He usually stole only good things, food and drink, and seldom touched valuable property. He lived in a cave, and went about entirely naked and alone, and depended upon his fitness in running to escape capture.
